COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course will put you to work as a feature writer. Through the semester you will report and write articles in a range of lengths, styles and on various topics, all suitable for publication in magazines. But to become a good writer it is essential to become a good reader. So while we report, plan, organize and write stories we will also read some of the feature length journalism that has been published in magazines and newspapers in the past few decades. We will extract the ingredients of truly memorable and remarkable writing and work to include them in our own craft. By familiarizing ourselves with the contemporary landscape of American publishing we will also learn how to best match stories to publication and how to appeal our work to the particular sensibilities of editors.

COURSE OBJECTIVES
To be successful in this course, you should expect to devote an average of 10-14 hours each week to preparing for class, participating in class sessions, studying course related materials, and completing course assignments. By the end of the semester you will be able to successfully take on and execute feature assignments of any length for a magazine or newspaper. Through several intensive reporting and writing exercises you will develop the skills to report and craft in-depth feature length stories that are seen most often in the pages of the best publications and websites. You will also refine your interviewing and research skills with a special eye to reporting for in-depth stories. Through the course you will develop the necessary skills to successfully pitch stories to editors.

READINGS
• For each class session, relevant magazine and newspaper articles, book chapters, and web- links will be posted to Blackboard
• A subscription to one magazine of your choice
ASSIGNMENTS & COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Blackboard Responses: 10 percent
You are required to complete all assigned readings and post a brief response to them (200 – 300 words) on Blackboard by 5 p.m. on the day before class. In your responses you will critique the pieces you read, applying ideas from class discussions to these readings. You must also pose at least three questions related to the reporting or writing of the piece that may be tackled during the class session on the following day. You will be graded (check, check minus, check plus). Late entries will receive no grade. Your graded responses will be returned to you at the end of each week.

Participation: 15 percent
Attendance and active participation are essential for you to do well in this course. Vibrant participation – comments, questions, criticisms – will allow all members of the group to benefit from the exchange of ideas. The class discussions will also allow us all to sharpen our own ideas and techniques for good feature writing. For every three classes that you miss, your final grade will drop by one letter grade.

Two feature articles: 30 percent
Twice during the course, you will report and write shorter feature articles. Before you begin your reporting and writing you will be required to pitch your idea to me and get me to sign off on it. The pieces are due at the beginning of class on the dates noted in the syllabus.

Short writing exercises: 15 percent
You will periodically be required to complete short writing assignments in class or at home, which will be graded. Your final story outline is graded as one of these short writing exercises.

Final piece: 30 percent
At the end of the semester you will submit a 3000-word piece on a topic of your choice. It should be a story that you can easily report from the city of Richmond over the fall semester.

A late submission without any warning will not be read and will receive an “F” grade.

On the first page, in the upper left corner please list your name, a one or two word title description, the date and the word count. This can all be done in the “header” space on a Microsoft Word document.

Please include page numbers at the bottom of each page. Include your name in the title of the Word document.

ACADEMIC HONESTY
Observe the honor code. You need to properly attribute all the sources you use in your stories. All work submitted should be done by the student in preparation for this specific course. (You may not, for example, hand in a story for this class that you are also using in another course). Evidence of plagiarism and cheating of any kind will result in immediate “F” on the assignment and this may be reported to the university administration for further consideration. If you have difficulty understanding how to cite sources or have questions concerning any of the above contact me immediately.

DISABILITY ACCOMMODATION
Students with disabilities who have been formally granted accommodations by a University of Richmond Disability Advisor must show their “Disability Accommodation Notice” to me within the first week of the academic term.
